

Harwick Homes expanding construction to Marco Island

SUBMITTED

According to Mark Smith, president of Harwick Homes, the Southwest Florida luxury homebuilder recently began construction of a new custom estate home on Marco Island.

Designed by award-winning architect Jonathan Kukk of Kukk Architecture & Design, the 6,300 square foot private residence offers commanding waterfront views overlooking Caxambas Pass situated at the southern tip of southeast Marco Island, Florida and represents Harwick's first residential build on the resort island.

Established in 1986, Harwick Homes is well-known for creating luxury custom homes along Southwest Florida's coast and in new-home communities, thanks, in part to its seamless Design-Build-Plus process that focuses on trust and communication.

"We believe the process of building a home should be one of the most pleasurable experiences of our clients' lives, a flawless evolution that begins with the initial design and includes the decisions made along the way to make your dream a reality," explains Smith. "We use the latest building materials, methods and technology to deliver a high quality custom home that perfectly captures our clients' vision and exceeds their expectations," he continues.

"This Marco Island location is one of the most sought-after waterfront locations in Southwest Florida, with deep water canals that afford easy access to the Gulf of Mexico," he confides. "With nature and art brilliantly intertwined, Marco Island offers a wealth of cultural activities that is attracting new homeowners from around the world."

Harwick Homes has been creating and remodeling homes of distinction in Southwest Florida for over 25 years building new luxury homes priced from $1 million to more than $10. The company also builds private residences on individual home sites along the Gulf of Mexico. From complete interior and exterior makeovers and room additions, to kitchen and bath renovations and architectural and design accents, Harwick Homes covers the spectrum of home improvement services.

Offices are located at 3368 Edge Circle, Unit 101 in Bonita Springs, Florida.
